THE OVERLAND TELEGRAPH.—From a report in the S. A. Register of the progress of the overland talegraph, we extract the following:—" we may mention that altogether there are about 250 teams employed on this line, and had Mr. Todd known that the essaou would have turned out so favourable as it has done, he has no doubt that a considerable saving could have been effected in the contracts for cartage. The stations, for which plans are now being prepared, will be erected at distances of from 150 to 150 miles apart. They will be substantially built of stone, and attached to each there will be two tenks capable of holding 16,000 gallous of water to provide for essaons of drought. At Fort Darwin there will be a central office, consisting of three compartments. On one side there will be the Bouth Australian officers' quarters, comprising seven rooms, while on the other side there will be the guarters for four assistants, besides a moss and store room. The company will keep one large steamer constantly at Port Darwin to repair the cable. Almost immediately an operator will leave Adelaids to join the wiring party at Beitana. He will accompany them as the wire progresses, which will be at the rate of about 100 miles per month, until he reaches the north end of Mr. Bago's contract of 500 miles. When the wire reaches the Peake at instrument will be permanently fixed there, under the charge of an operator, and another specialor will go on to connect the wire with the scuth end of section A, where by that time the wire will have been continued another 300 usites, and a second operator will be assistenced at the Charlotte Waters. A third will be placed in charge of the second depot, near the junction of the Rugh and the Fincke, and a fourth operator will proceed with the wiring party to sections C. SATURDAY, JUNE 24, 1871.

It is a proverb that "you may take a horse to the water, but you cannot make him drink." The resolution of the Legislative Council requesting the appointment of a Commission of Inquiry on the Superannuation Bill is an expression of the feelings of a body not in high favour with the Administration. We do not think that the Assembly laid aside the bill without some reason. In a better spirit, and with greater leisure, it might have been possible to hold a conference spirit, and with greater leisure, it might have been possible to hold a conference with the Upper House, and obtain the with drawal of that part of the measure supposed to trench upon the privileges of the Lower Chamber. It may be a most question whether the amendment introduced authorising gratuities was or was not a violation of the restriction which prohibits the initiation of money clauses in the Legislative Council. But certainly it has that aspect. The bill as it came tainly it has that aspect. The bill as it came from the Lower House made no provision for gratuities, while the Superannuation allowances were made a charge on the Consolidated Revenue. This change in the paymaster made of course an execution of course an execution of course and execution of the course of course and execution of the course of course and execution of the course of of course an essential difference.

No person, whether interested or not in the bill, is more concerned for the widow and fatherless than we are. But the widows and children of Civil servants have no higher claims to compassion as such than others in the community. The circumstance that husbands and fathers have been employed in the Public Service is no reason why a distinction should be Service is no reason why a distinction should be made in their favour as a mere act of charity. The law which gives a pension to the wives and children of military officers who die in the Service is founded upon public policy. He who serves his country as a soldier risks his life. He usually incurs that risk in robust health, when he undertakes domestic obligations. Dying in the Service, his commission passes to other hands, and what perhaps might have cost half a fortune to buy coases to benefit his family. It is, what perhaps might have cost half a fortune to buy coases to benefit his family. It is, therefore, enly justice, enforced by sound policy, for the State to take charge of his widow and children at his death. It is necessary that the man should go into battle, if not with a light heart, yet with a sense that in doing his duty to his country he is not utterly destroying the prospects of his children. But Civil servants differ in no way from those in other employments, excepting that their situations are supposed to be more permanent, and to be commonly less laborious. and to be commonly less laborious.

A pension to a Civil servant may, however, A pension to a civil servant may, however, be defended for several reasons. It may be made a part of his salary. It may prevent what is always painful, the sight of an old Public servant in poverty. These are serious considerations, and though there are others which may outweigh them, as we think, in relation to a colonial pension system, still they are not to be treated as naught.

But providing for pensions has not relieved Civil servants from a duty which, in common with all other persons, they are bound to perform. We assume that the salary in the Public employment implies a social rank. According to that rank it is quite possible for men to make a provision, either by saving or by insurance, superior to the gratuities. A small annual payment in early life will give a certain sum for a family in the event of death. The gratuities given by the Crown will be a few pounds, or a few hundreds according to the length of service and rank of the deceased. The widow of a young man would be entitled to a very small contribution from the fund. But his wife and children would be just at that But his wife and children would be just at that period of life when family wants are heaviest. The Civil officer who lives till sixty has commonly his family off his hand; or, at least, has reached an age when such may be fairly expected. But the man who dies in early life leaves his children in their infancy and child-hood, and can derive from any system recommended only a very small relief, just enough to cover their descent from competence to poverty. The provision therefore that will be made, or can be made in the most urgent cases, is very insufficient for any useful purpose beyond what might be compassed by a small insurance, according to the rank of the person obtaining it, and which will require only a small annual payment to continue.

payment to continue.

The advantage of this course is, that the provision for the wife and family, in the event of being left, is not on the permanence of a Government appointment We have repeatedly seen men dismissed from the Public Serseen men dismissed from the Public Service, sometimes for a good reason, and sometimes for an insufficient one. We have seen the eagerness with which their places have been filled, and the reluctance of those who would be benefited by their fall, to admit any excuse or palliation. This course is an objection to the value of pensions; but it is a still greater objection to the value of the gratuities which will be lost by any imputed fault. We may be told indeed that this will be a greater reason for men to conduct themselves with propriety, and we conduct themselves with propriety, and we should admit the argument if the goodness of their conduct was the security of their position. But it is not so. The addition of the gratuity clause, while it increases the weight of the annual payment, also adds to the risk of those

But if we are to provide for widows and children because exposed to poverty by the death of Civil servants, we must remember that there are others who may claim our compassion. When it is objected that it is compassion. When it is objected that it is unjust that men who have no families should be compelled to contribute to the fund, it is sometimes answered that they are better able to pay. Besides that this is an odd principle in the science of government, we deny the conclusion. There government, we deny the conclusion. There are many persons who remain unmarried, not from any selfish objection to the responsibilities of a family, or from dissipated habits, but because they may have to support a mother or sisters, who claim an asylum and exhaust their means. Our literary readers will remember the history of CHARLES LAMB, who held a Civil office, and who remained unmarried that office, and who remained unmarried that he might fulfil what he deemed to be a paramount duty and engagement—to take care of a beloved sister subject to paroxyms of insanity—a grand sacrifice for a noble woman. We know there are persons in this colony who are so charged with the maintenance of the widow and the father-level that is not therefore to be inferred that less. It is not, therefore, to be inferred that they are fit subjects for legislative scarifying, we have not dealt with the difficulty of arranging the fund upon any solid basis by preserving the system of gratuities. No doubt all the liabilities of life may be put under

The Spuncy Morning Deraid.

Certain heads and made subject to calculations; but one necessary element of safety is that a part at least of this deficit loan has now been floating in the colony for some years, the compose the group. The security of the Consolidated Revenue Fund removes one would not have been different if the loan had an unarent danger. But it leaves it utterly impose the consolidated for any ten years. The apparent danger; but it leaves it utterly impos-sible to calculate what will be the weight upon that fund. When you grant a man a pension after so many years' service, you may thoroughly estimate your liability. But when you take into consideration the contingency of families—wives and children, widows and orphans—you can form no idea how large will be the number who may be claimants upon the bounty of the State. In our opinion, therefore, the introduction of a clause charging the fund with these liabilities is not only wrong in prin-ciple, as beyond the business of the Govern-ment, but tends to endanger the permanence of the system under which pensions are granted

> Our of the ten millions sterling to which, in round numbers, our Public Debt now amounts, it has been recently stated in Parliament that our railways are not responsible for more than six millions and a half. If this is so it leaves about three millions and a half to be accounted for in minor expenditures. The sum total is large, but there have been many contributories to it. For many years past no Estimates have received Parliamentary sanction which have not included some amounts for loan which have not included some amounts for loan for other than railway purposes. Many of the sums have been in themselves comparatively small, yet the accumulation of them, and the repetition of the process year after year, has made the aggregate total mount up to a respectable sum. Under these circumstances the Assembly need not be above taking notice of the criticisms of the Council, and the remark made there during the present of the remark made there during the passage of the Loan Bill for this year is a fair one, namely, that works have been and continue to be made that works have been and continue to be made chargeable on posterity that ought to be more or less defrayed out of current resources. In one item the Ministry anticipated and disarmed criticism. The sum of £10,000 for military stores had been put on the loan list, and as this material would be mostly dissipated in practice and salutes, it is obviously a proper charge on current expenditure. On a recomin practice and salutes, it is obviously a proper charge on current expenditure. On a remonstrance being made, the PREMIER agreed to transfer the amount to the annual estimates, and the readiness with which this was done may perhaps be taken as some intimation that the present Government is prepared to tecognise a fair distinction between temporary and permanent expenditure.

> In his recent budget speech at Mel-bourne, Mr. Francis went so far as to may down the doctrine that it was not fair to devolve the whole cost of railways on posterity, inasmuch as the generation that constructed them reaped the immediate benefit of the expenditure of the money, and also because they were constantly depreciating in

If this is true of railways, how much more is it true of minor works less directly productive and less durable. It has been asked whether wooden sheds, barges, punts, dredges, wooden jetties, and wharfs, wooden bridges, and similar works, many of which may be entirely used up by the time the debentures issued for their construction are redeemable, ought to be made chargeable on a future geneought to be made chargeable on a future generation. It would appear that not merely the first cost of some bridges, but even the additional sum required to repair the damages by flood are made chargeable on posterity. But such damages may occur year after year, and such repairs cannot be said to be reproductive except in the unintended sense of reproducing that which is destroyed. Many bridges, too, have been built by loans, on which a toll is impossible, because for nine months of the year the river is fordable, and therefore the toll can be evaded, so that these bridges cannot be made to yield enough revenue to keep them in good condition, much less to repay their cost.

The argument against such loans would not apply if we systematically redeemed our debentures by annual instalments, because then the effect of a loan would simply be to distribute the burden over a term of years. But at present we simply borrow, and leave to the chapter of chances the task of repayment. The amount of debt we have discharged on its coming due is exceedingly small, for in nearly every instance debentures which have reached their maturity have been renewed. This neglect might be remedied if we were to consolidate our debt under conditions proto consolidate our debt under conditions proto consolidate our debt under conditions pro-viding for its extinction in a term of years, say fitty or even a hundred. It was the intention of the late Government of Victoria to consoli-date the debt of that colony, and the plan will probably be carried out. question. The same thing has been several times talked about in this colony, but while admittedly desirable, no Treasurer has as yet fairly tackled the problem. It must be understood that such an arrangement would compel us to redeem a portion of our obligations every year without fail, but the effect would probably be to make our securities more highly appreciated in the London market, and to get rid entirely of the awkwardness of having to renew our debentures sometimes in large amounts, and perhaps at very incon-venient junctures. It is perfectly certain that venient junctures. It is perfectly certain that we shall not be able to pay off out of surplus revenue our debentures as they fall due, and we must, therefore, either renew or consolidat

The Prorogation Speech contains an ex-pression implying that the Ministers are of opinion that our finances are now on a satisopinion that our mances are now on a satisfactory footing. This is, however, very far from being the case. We cannot indulge in self-congratulation until the ad valorem duties are repealed, until a municipal system is completely established, until the incidence of taxation is made as equitable as possible, until provision is made for the extinction of the public debt at a certain—though it may be a distant—date, and until the revenue shows an elasticity equal to the growing expenditure of a growing country.

Another matter on which much stress was laid in the Council was the expediency of raising a portion of the permanent debt in the colony itself. The Government has made provision for borrowing locally £700,000 on short-dated securities, and the question therefore naturally suggests itself why it should short-dated securities, and the question there-fore naturally suggests itself why it should not have recourse to the same market for loans of longer currency. When Mr. SAMUEL proposed to make a local funded debt he was opposed on two grounds, viz., first, that the deficit should not be fixed in a permanent form; secondly, that it would injure commercial finance for the Government to absorb colonial capital. The first objection was stronger than the second. Treasury bills absorb colonial capital quite as much as a long-dated debt would, and that the banks are not injured by the issue of these securities is sufficiently proved by the fact that they are the principal would not have been different if the loan had been negotiated for say ten years. The TREASURER has recently stated that up to a certain point he can borrow in the colony to better advantage than in London. He can issue his five per cent. stock at par, and without expense for brokerage, while in England the stock does not net par when all charges are deducted. To this bas to be added the consideration that the interest has to be remitted to England and To this has to be added the consideration that the interest has to be remitted to England, and expense also incurred in redeeming the principal at maturity. On the other hand, securities current in the colony bring in revenue under the Stamp Act whenever they are transferred or pledged. What is the limit to which the Government could, without injury, operate upon the local market, is a matter that would require close inquiry; but the limit has not been reached yet, and Government securities are in great demand by investers who are content with moderate interest in return for complete security. Those, too, who are apprehensive of the Government drawing too freely on colonial capital should remember that money flows where it is wanted, and that all the financial institutions in the colony would instinctively, and as a matter of self-interest, so operate as to check or cure any scarcity; and if the borrowing operations of the Thassurer were conducted judiciously and gradually, the supply would be equal to the demand. the interest has to be remitted to England, and DRIVING WITHOUT LIGHTS.—In a paragraph, a few days ago, we called attention to an existing by-law, passed by the Municipal Council in January last, by which all private vehicles were amenable for driving without lights. From several cases which came before the Water Poirce Court, yesterday, it appears that the public do not understand that the by-law is applicable to drays, vans, vehecipades, and in fact vehicles of all kinds, whether public or private.

THE COMBLAIN RIFLE AND CARBINE.—A proposition is now before the Government to import into this colony the Belgian "Comblain Rifle and Carbine," for the use of our Volunteer force. The "Comblain" can be loaded in three motions, described as follows:—(1.) Place the thumb of the right hand up to second joint in front of the trigger, pressing it forward sharply. The breech is thus opened, the empty cartidge case geleted, and the hammer phased at full cock. (2.) Insert the cartridge in the breech; pressing it home with the thumb. (3.) Close the under-guard. The piece can then be fired at once, by pressing the trigger with the forc-singer. To half-cerk when loaded, the motions are equally simple and expeditious. For this purpose sieze the knob on tail of the lever behind the trigger, press it down gently, and the harmor is brought to half-cock. Close the lever, or under-guard, and the arm cannot be discharged thus, except by breaking the half-brat. To full-cock from half-cock, place the thumb on the comb of the hammer, and draw it back in the usual way. To unload, or extract a cartridge. Draw down the lever but without the jerk, and the cartridge will side back into the throat of the breech piece, from which it will drop out into the hand The whole of the different parts of this arm, both ride and carbine, from the nose cap to the heal place, can be placed epart with a pocket quarter-inch secewhriver. The mechanism (partly of steel and partly of phosphoric bronce) is runarkable for its simplicity, compariness, and lightness. It would evidently be as serviceable in the night time as during day.

ADMINISTRATION OF JUSTICE.—The following Despatch and Cabinet Minute respecting the release of Rovell and Rangi, convicted for the murder of a South Sealalander, was a few days ago presented to both Houses of Parliament, by command:—"The Secretary of State for the Colonies to Governor the Earl of Belaucra.—Downingstreet, 9th March, 1871. My Lord.—I have received your Lordship's Despatch, No. 284, of 7th December, reporting that you had ordered the discharge from custody of Hovell and Rangi, the late master and one of the crew of the Young Australian. I cannot see that the unfortunate miscarriage of justice in the case of Levinger, through the technical error of the disallowance of the prisoner's challenge of a juryman, in any degree diminishes the guilt of the other two prisoners who were duly convicted; and I am therefore unable to concur with you in the opinion that the secape of Levinger from punishment was a reason sufficient for the release of Hovell and Rangi. PENRITH MUNICIPALITY.—The nomination of candidates for Aldermanic heapons and Municipal auditors took place on Thursday at non. Mr. Davis, returning officer's cierk, having read the Governor's proclamation appointing Dr. Thomas Wilmott first returning officer, that cancer a cierce, naving reson the towersor's proclamation appointing Dr. Thomas wilmost first returning officer, this gratternan proceeded to read a list of candidates and their nominators, when sixteen were read for Aldermanic honours and three for the office of Auditors. After the formal business had been gone through Mr. William Roberts addressed the electors, congratulating them on the fact that at last a Municipality was inaugurated, and on the propriety of electing suitable persons as Alderman. He referred to the use of the succint Anglo-Saxon word eldermen, or aldermen as we have it, which signified men who from age or wisdom or both, were such as the people could confide in. They should choose men who could control their tempers, and allow the business to be quietly and harmoniously done. Mr. James J. Riley, J.P., expressed his pleasure at Mr. Roberts sederas. Three cheers were given for the Queen, three cheers were given for Mr. Riley, and three for the Returning Officer, and the meeting then dispersed.

PARROTS. — REMARKABLE FACT. — Lately a parrot in the possession of a medical gentleman in this city, in a fit of passion, seized upon a parroquot in another cage, and tore off his upper bill. The wounded bird bird profusely, and it is supposed would have died had not the bleeding been stopped. The most remarkable circumstance was that a female parroquet in the same cage, sympathising with her wounded companion, has since treated him as if a young bird, and fed him constantly as such. The mixture of sympathy and affection is unique in the known history of the feathered tribe, We may add that the virious parrot is an Indian bird; the parroquets are Australian.

MUNICIPAL DISTRICT OF ST. PETERS.—An election for alderman for Cook's River Ward, in the above municipality, in room of Mr. C. H. Lenchan, was held on Wednesday last, at St. Peters. There were two candidates in the field, viz.—Mr. J. T. Gorus, of Brooklya Lodge, Cook's River, and Mr. Joseph Noble, likewise of Cook's River, considerable interest was manifested by many of the electors in this election; and the declaration of the result of the polling was anxiously avaited for. At hairpast 3 o'clock p.m. the Mayor (Mr. G. A. Tucker) announced the result of the poll as follows:—Mr. Gorus, 41: Mr. Robbs, 37. Majority for Mr. Gorus, 4. This was officially declared on Thursday morning, at 9 o'clock, and Mr. Cours duly pronounced alderman, to fill the vacancy caused by Mr. Lenchan's relirement.

FORENSIC AMENITIES.—In a case tried at the Small Debte Coart, I pswich, and reported in the Gueenslander, two solicitors quarrelled with each other, and during the heating of the case one indulged in such expressions as "incurnation of trickery," "mean little follow," "traud and trickery," "infernal liar," "infernal little follow," "and the other in "mean hound," pottliogging sarrangements," "the greatest acoundred ever met, "not a spark of gentlemanly blood in your voins," &c. &c. The two solicitors continued to indulge in similar language to that with which the Court was treated throughout the opining of the case, each threatening how he would serve the other if he got him outside the Court, &c.

THE PROROGATION.—We have been requested to state that there was a full detachment of Artillary in attendance on Thursday, who fired the salutes from the battery of Lady Macquarie's Point when his Excellenty left Government House to prorogue Parliament, and also on his return.

BARDARISM IN THE INTERIOR.—An instance of dabolical crueity is stated by the Age to have been perpetrated on Sunday last; the victim of the Sendieh malice being an unfortunate milch goat, the property of Mr. W. G. O'Neill. That journal says that gotts, however useful they may be when kept in their place, are an intolerable nuisance when running at large in a town, no one will deny; and either to destroy them with as little owners, is provided for by law; but to visit their instanctive faults by acts of crueity is reprehensible and inhuman in the extreme. Nothing can sneed in deliberate or unity at milce the act of the monster in human guise who finding a gott in his garden, yard, or verandah, seizes the wretched creature by the horns and drawing his knife from his pockst pieroes its cychalis, making two terrible gashes, and thus tortrard and sightless turns the agontsed creature into the street. And yet Queanbeyan owns the wretch who has done this 10 n Monday morning the victim of this demon's rage was discovered standing helpless in the creek in front of the Court-house, and was at once taken to the house of its owner. The inhuman being—we cannot call him man—who perpetrated the abovenamed attentive, deserved and brought to justice. It is not long since another act of Mr. J. J. Wright. The poor brute was discovered with the skin of the neck cut all round, like a ringed tree, and the skin of the not of the paws served in like manner. Well may our community by humb to have in its midst personn capable of such a rounder.

The prisoner, on Friday last, arrived at Ten-smile Creak and was in the usual course accommodated with comfortable quarters in the lock-up. After nightfall he requested to be allowed to rotire to the closet. Constable Berney, who was on duty, opened the door in compliance with his request, when Crowe without the loss of a moment made a spring, and before the astonished constable had time to recover from his surprise, he had slipped past him, cleaved the fence, and vanished in the gloom. THE ENPLORER LEICHHARDT.—"The following estract from a private letter, wristen at a camp on the Woodforde, latitude 2:28, and dated April 30, by a member of one of the Part Darwin telegraph construction parties, will, "says the S. A. Advertiser, "be of interest, now that the tate of the long-loss explorer beighhardt is sgain occupying public attention in these colonies:—"At the north-east end of Lake Eyre there is a very large creek coming from the north, named the Jarvia, after its discoverer, and Tireaws by the natives. Well on this creek, a long way to the north, eight white men were killed by the natives a great many years ago. They were cutting their way through dense jungle and scrub from the east to the morth bank of the creek, when the natives, who had followed them for days, watching for an opportunity, fell upon them and killed them all. Now, as this must have happened very close to the place where M Kinlay found traces of Leichhardt, is it not probable that these unfortunates must have been members of his party? There is also another thing which seems to confirm this supposition. At the time fir R. M'Donald was in the North, an old gray horse with a Covernment brand, and hoofs of great length, turned and grewing upwards, was found to the south of the junction of this scass creek with Lake Eyre. Now as this horse did not belong to the South Australian Government, and Leichhardt had horses no branded, it is very likely that it belonged to him. This is old news in the north-west to some, but il don't whether the fact of white men having been killed on this creek has ever been known to you. ATERMET TO FLOOD A COAL Pix.—The Hobert Yeven Mercury reports that on Saturday night, June 10th, acme persons, as yet undetected, perpetrated a most malicious act by turning a large body of water into the workings of Mercelita's coal pit on Sini's censes, New Town. That evening Mr. Mercelith left the pit is its usual condition, but on visiting it on Sanday afternoon he discovered marks of clay about the mouth of the pit, and also say that the windians had been interfered with. He obtained assistance and descended the shaft, when he discovered that a large body of water had been turned into the working. In order to explain how this was effected, it becomes necessary to mention that on a higher level than that on which Mercelith's shaft has been sunk, are two abandoned workings, one on Lowe's land, and the other on Mose's. These two old workings are connected subterraneously by a thirt, or drive, which is continued from the working on Mose's land to a shaft recently worked by one Harris, some distance down the hill, on flips's assistant. two old workings are connected subterraneously by a thirl, or drive, which is continued from the working on Mose's isside to a shaft recently worked by one Harris, some distance down the hill, on Simis' estate. Mercitih's working his between the two laster, and, being sunk, his shaft intersected this thirl. But in order to prevent the water which continually flows down the thirl from coming into the shaft, as hole was carried round the shaft and connected with the lower part of the thirl, so that when the side of the shaft was effectually dammed up with clay and timber, the water had a free course clear of the shaft. On Satterday night seems person must have lowered one or more sun into the shaft, and these, having taken Mercdith's pick from where he left it at another part of the working, sugaway the timber and clay which had been put in as a dam, and the water from the thair flowed into the workings. On discovering what had been done. Meredith stopped up the hole, and on Monday commenced balling out the water. At it had flowed to the lowest part of the workings, it could be cally got at by the operators proceeding on their hands and knees, and balling is out a bucketful at time, which proved a tirescens and troublesoms job. There cannot be a doubt but that the damage was maintended by the constitution of the preparation of the conviction of the perpotrators of the cowardly courage.

SOUTH AUSTRALIA AND THE P. AND O. Mail Sprakers.—The South Australian Register writes—
"The Chief Secretary has in a despatch briefly priperspicuously stated to the Governments of New South Mailes, Victoria, Tassamina, Queenaland, and New Zealand, the case of South Australia in favour of the ocean steamers via Suez calling at Glensig. He emphasises the fact that, except in the minor matter of the particular port of call, the justice of South Australia's present claim has been twice admitted by the colonies chiefly interested, and urges that as the question has been again finally remitted to the consideration of these colonies, they should be consistent, and acquisece when there is the assurance that their acquisceence will be of practical utility. The advantages of substituting Glensig for Nepsan Bay are explicitly pointed out, and it is properly urged that joint action should be taken to secure for Australia the full benefit of the shorter mail routes across the Ruropsan Continent, and of the greater rapidity of loosmotion of which the mail steamers are capable. Accompanying the despatch is an interesting statement showing the differences in time between the arrivals of the branch mail steamers and the ocean steamers, and also the correspendence between the Chamber of Commerce and Messar, kendell and Farquaher, which has already appeared in our columns. SOUTH AUSTRALIA AND THE P. AND O. MAIL

OUR MELBOURNE LETTER.

OUR MELBOU'RNE LETTER.

THE crisis which impended at the date of my last letter was not unnecessarily delayed. The Government, having ascertained beyond act with that defeat awaited them, determined not to prolong the struggle, but give the enemy as little trouble as possible; and, after an able defence of their policy by the Chief Secretary, they yielded to their inevitable fate. The intelligent and dispassionate observer, whose judgment has not been warped by the fallacies of the day, regards the last act of Sir James M'Culloch as one of the most honourable of his career. He certainly deserved better treatment than he has received at the hands of the free-traders. Direct taxation has been an article of their creed for years past, and it is difficult to see how free trade is to be realised without a property and income tax. It required no conjuror to foresee, however, that the Minister who had the courage of propose it would certainly meet with determined opposition from the classes most affected by it; and it would have been but generous on the part of the free-trade party in the House, to have supported the Ministry who had assumed the advocacy of one of their own principles. But the temptation to steal a victory proved too strong for them, and thus they were found in the same division list with the ultra-protectionists. To these two sections of the House were added the nondescripts, who have a weakness in favour of the winning side, and the Ministry, thus bereft of their accustomed support, were beaten by two to one.

as there are measures ready for discussion, and the great interests of the country will go on suffering from the absence of those enactments, which might be discussed and acttled in half the time that it will take to decide between the Glad would I have been if I could honestly have evaded what seemed the imperative duty of defending myself and my fellow-parishioners from the inevitable charge of Ritualism, or if in the performance of such duty I could have avoided hurting the feelings of my reverend friend, who seems to have contorted the justifiable defence of myself and fellows into an unprovoked and inexcusable attack upon him.

I will not presume to lecture the reverend gentleman on the impropriety of charging any person engaged in the performance of a painful duty with "many misrepresentations, some half-truths (which are more dangerous than falsehoods), and also certain statements which are absolutely untrue," and yet neither withdrawing the charge nor attempting to substantiate it.

Nor is it necessary to comment on the fact that "our good clergyman" has entrusted his defence to two women, who confess themselves to be weak minded.

Nor need I impute to Mr. Kemmis the knowledge of the fact that the letter which he publishes was evidently not written by two women at all, but by a penson which are the protection of two members of the gentler sex, who are thrust forward to bear the brunt of any revenge his own covert attack may provoke.

If this anonymous letter had appeared by itself, I should have felt no obligation to answer it, but as it has been adopted by Mr. Kemmis, I am compelled to do so at the risk of unwillingly giving him some further annoyance. Premising, however, in the first place, that I have fallen considerably in my own that I have been actuated by motives of anger and revenge, generated wholly or partially by the loss of an office, which I would at any time have voluntarily resigned, if any good could have been thereby effected.

THIODON'S WONDERS.—No exhibition that has yet visited Sydney has been more freely or more deservedly patronised by the public than the one that has been at the School of Arts during the last three or four weeks. The beautiful pancramic views, with the sendless variety of mechanical figures, moving about with almost life-like precision, produce an exhibition of the most entertaining and interesting character. The principal of the automata is the slack-rope vaulter, which is certainty a wonder in itself. It goes through the most extraordinary evolutions on the rope. The Falls of Niagars, with Blondin making his ascent; the Storm at Sas, with its striking phenomena—the shipwreck, and recus of the crew—are as true representations of nature as it is possible for art and mechanism to make them. There are not wanting the accompanisants of making for Miss Thiodon on the plane, and Mr. Margette as a singer of comic songs, are very entertaining.

THE CHARGR OF LIBEL AGAINST MR BARTON.—It will be remembered that a criminal processoution was instituted by the New Zealand Government against Mr. George Barton, the editor of the Otego Daviy Times, tor libel. The alleged libel was contained in an article charging the Government with impering with the Press telegrams. The case was proceeded with, but it would appear that the prosecution has been abandoned, as a New Zealand journal states that:—"At the criminal sittings of the Supreme Court Mr. Barton surrenders it to hisrecognisances, and asked to be discharged. The application was deterred, pending the discharged of the Grand Jury. Intimation was given by Mr. Barton that he condiders the abandonment of the proceedings is to be taken as an acknowledgment of the truth of the statements published by him. On the following day he was discharged, and he subsequently issued a writ against the Hom. Mesers. Fox. Gisborne, Sewell, and Vogel, and Mr. Spencer. A NECK-AND-NECK OCEAN RACK.—What may fairly be considered a "neck-and-neck" race, if such term may be applied to ocean voyaging, has just been outcladed between two fine clippers which arrived in Hubson's Ray on Saturday last. One (says the Argue) is the iron clipper ship Loos Lomond, from Ghasgow, and the other the Abredeen clipper ship Moravian, from London, a wooden bottom, and between the two it has been a very close contest. The Look Lomond left the Clyde on April 6, and the Moravian passed the Lizard on April 7. Both vessels crossed the Equator on the same date, May 2, the "Looh" in longitude 25 W., and the "Missionary" in longitude 25 W., and the "Missionary" in longitude 25 W., and the "Missionary" in longitude 25 W. The meridian of the Cape of Good Hope was also passed on the same date, May 2, the two ships, the southing of the Clyde clipper being in latitude 38 10, and of the Aberdonian in latitude 42; and after experiencing a succession of westerly winds, both vessels entered for the Phillip Heads and anchored in Hobson's Bay the same day.

A larger amount of business has been done in the Stock and Share Market during the past week, in consequence of buyers evincing a disposition to pay advanced rates for dividend-paying investments. This has been very marked in the prices of bank shares, all of which close at higher quotations than before reported. Commercial cannot be obtained under 57, and none have changed hands. City opened at an advance of 2s. 6d., and afterwards a good parcel was placed at £6 11s. 6d. to 6\frac{2}{6}. Joint Stock were also in demand, and rose to 8\frac{2}{7}, with a firm market. Holders of New South Wales ask 32, but we hear of a few having been quitted at 31\frac{1}{7}, and afterwards at 5s. higher; a similar improvement has taken place in New Zealands. Steam shares are not in great request; Ausstralasian opened at a decline of 5s., which was afterwards recovered; Clarence and Richmond preferential are rather scarce. There has been some inquiry for General Assurance, with transactions at a rise of 2s.; Sydney Fire would find a market at quotation. In mining stock the principal demand has been for Peak Downs at from sixpence lower to a shilling higher than last week's rate; and Wallsend coal have been done at 2s. 6d. better. The sale of a fifth share in Paxton, Hohnan, and Co.'s claim, Tambaroora, was negotiated for £4000, and the purchase of a tenth share, at a higher rate, is pending. Gas stock maintains its value. Debentures are becoming more difficult to obtain, and 1 per cent. premium would be readily paid for New South Wales terminables; New Zealand Treasury bills are now worth 102. The course of sales has been: Banks—City, 6\frac{1}{7}, £6 11s. 6d., 6\frac{2}{7}; Joint Stock, 8\frac{2}{7}, 8\frac{2}{7}; New South Wales, 31\frac{2}{7}; New Zealand, 16, 16\frac{1}{7}. The produce sales held to-day exhibited a falling-off in prices, and a decrease in demand. Tallow was so dull of sale that a considerable portion of the catalogues remained unsold. Heavy hides also suffered a decline, which was not shared by other qualities. Leather in fair demand at about late rates. Annexed are particulars of sales: produce sales held to-day exhibited a casks tallow at £26.

The import markets are devoid of any features which would induce anticipations of any improvement in business. Trade is as dull as it can be, stocks of goods quite out of proportion to trade requirements, and the weather of a character to prevent the transmission of goods to the interior. There is scarcely an article of general consumption of which present supplies do not represent trade requirements for several months, and of some imported goods there is enough to last the remainder of the year, independently of five cargoes now due from England. There has been a good deal doing recently in breadstuffs, and we hear of large also of wheat, mostly for forward delivery at 6s. 10½d. to 7s. net. Flour has been steady and firm at £16 to £17. deal doing rece. 1tly in breadstuffs, and we hear of large sales of wheat, mostly for forward delivery at 6s. 10\frac{1}{2}d. to 7s. net. Flour has been steady and firm at £16 to £17. Bulk ale, of best brands, has been sold in trade lots at £7 10s. to £7 15s.; and bottled at 9s. to 9s. 9d. for querts, and 6a. 9d. for Devenish's pints. Brandies remain firm at former quotations, 7s. to 7s. 3d. for dark in wood, 29s. to 29s. 6d. for Hennessy's case; and 25s. to 26s. for other good brands. The liquor market is otherwise dull. Candles move slowly at 10d. to 10\frac{1}{2}d. for small lines of best. There is not much doing in coffee, and quotations are unathanged, say 8\frac{1}{2}d to 9d for Plantation, 7d. to 7\frac{1}{2}d. for Java, 6d. to 6\frac{1}{2}d. for Manila. Dundee goods are almost unsalable. Cornsacks are nominally worth 12s., and woolpacks 3s. 8d. to 3s. 9d. There is still some inquiry for dried fruits at 6d. to 6\frac{1}{2}d. for currants, 10d. to 11d. for Muscatel raisins, 6\frac{1}{2}d. for Elemes. Sultana and good Cape are also wanted. The large stock of fish in retailers' hands renders it difficult to move a parcel unless at buyers' price. Groceries and oilmen's stores are extremely dull, and outside lots have been offering at low prices without inducing sales. The forced sales of sugar in the beginning of the week have quite upset the market, which, with present stocks, will take some time to recover. The receipts this year have been unusually large, and the sources of supply more varied than ever known before. There is hardly anything doing in teas; purchasers operate sparingly, pending advices regarding the new crop. Tobacco of leading brands is firm at former quotations; inferior and faulty have a slow sale.

The improvements are such as to command every requisite for carrying on the station on the most approved and effectual methods, having a magnificent supply of water giving every facility for erecting washpools and other necessary appliances for preparing the wool for the London length, as from the care and attention which they have received for many years past the sheep stand unsurpased in the colonies.

From the annual sales of sheep, a very large return is made; and the wool bearing the famous CCX brand has always maintained its prestige, and brought the highest value of any clip in New South Wales.

There is a good dwelling-house, with out-offices, making a comfortable homesteed for any family.

This station will be offered with the whole or 6000 sheep, and the balance, say 5000, if not sold with the station, will be offered in lots. In offering the sheep in this way buyers, who are desirous of obtaining stud flocks, will have a chance of making some valuable purchases from these sheep. We, therefore, especially invite all those who are desirous of forming stud flocks not to loss this opportunity, as it is one which rarely presents itself, of purchasing such well-bred sheep.

The plan of the station will be found at our office, 246,
Pitt-street, and all other particulars will be given an application to the Auctioneers.

The above-described
MAGNIFICENT CITY AND SUBURDAN PROPERTIES,
full particulars of which will be shortly published.

THE BATNES, TREEVE, and CO., in bringing forward these choice properties, content themselves in a pre-liminary notice with requesting the attention of capitalists, trustees, and merchants, to the rare opportunity offered of securing property which, without doubt, is part of THE HEART OF THE CITY.

For many years no such opportunity has been offered, nor ieft likely such will recur. The peculiar circumstances of the estate requiring a division of the property, demands and affords to the public the advantage of securing investments second to none in the colony.

LONGONG.

PICHARDSON and WRENCH have recived instructions to sell by public auction, at the Rooms, Pitt-street, Sydney, on MONDAY, Stel July, at 11 o'clock, THE PICK OF THE WELL-KNOWN BALGOWNIE ESTATE, including BALGOWNIE HOUSE and HOMESTEAD FARM of 100 ACRES OF GOOD LAND, Jery boartirally situated at the foot of Mount Keirs, near the Bulli Read. The isad is enclosed and subdivided into paddocks, nearly all cleared, partially stumped, and from 20 to 30 acres laid down in English grasses. It is well watered by Balgownie Creek, and has a right of road to a waterhole reserved in the original subdivision of the estate.

Balgownie House is a comfortable family residence, bullt of brick and weatherboards, containing 8 rooms, ball, kitchen, stable, coach-house, and other cut-offices. A garden and orchard surrounds the house.

This is a desirable property in the favourite Illawarra district, surrounded by a portion of the valuable cetates of the late Henry Ostorne, Kaq, and the property formerly belonging to William Speer, Eaq., recently purchased by James Osborne, Kaq. In addition to its value as a delighfully-situated farm and homesteed, there can be little doubt that the celebrated coal seems of the locality underlie the surface, and that some future day this part of Balgownie will be worked with immense profit for coal, the unlimited demand for which never ceases.

Plan on view at the Rooms.

IMPERATIVE SALE HARTLEY KEROPENE OIL AND PARAFFINE COMPANY'S MINERAL ESTATE, MANUFACTURING PLANT. By order of the Mortgagees,

Preliminary Notice.

Preliminary Notice.

Preliminary Notice.

Prevent instruction to sell by public suction, at the Rooms, Pitt-street, Sydney, on MONDAY, the 24th JULY next, at 11 o'clock.

The above valuable mineral and manufacturing property.

The Hartley Kerosens Oil Company's Mines and Works are situated within three miles of the town of Hartley and about three miles from the Bailway Station at One-Tree Hill.

The estate comprises—321 acres of freehold land, upon which most of the manufacturing plant is erected, 960 acres of conditionally purchased mineral land; and 820 acres of leased mineral land, including a parcel of 120 acres, upon which has been opened a fine soam of common coal.

The whole estate, freehold and leasehold, aggregates 2101 acres, and underlying a large portion, it has been proved by sinking, that beds of the valuable kerosene mineral oan be relied on, thereby making the supply nearly inchanging the supply nearly inchanging the supply nearly inchanges the supply nearly in

The plant of machinery is capable of manufacturing 5000 gallons of oil per week. An inventory of it may be inspected at the Rooms.

be inspected at the Rooma.

The above property contains, what may fairly be stated to be, an inexhaustible bed of the richaest mineral in the world for the production of kerosene oil; and not withstanding the ill-success which has hitherto attended the production of a burning oil as a profitable speculation, it is quite clear that it is outly a question of time and additional experience which are required to bring this new industry to a complete success, and enable it to control the colonial markets to the exclusion of the large quantity of oil now annually imported from America. But while this desideratum is being accomplished, the increasing demand of the colonial and foreign gas companies for the raw mineral of this mine will amply suffice to pay a large interest on the capital value of the property, thereby giving the purchaser at the intended sale the double advantage of securing a good investment for the present, with immense prospective enhanced value at a no distant date.

Further particulars may be obtained at the Rooms where plans may also be inspected. Torms at sale.
